Sites:

The artists may visit (without obligation) the site along a rather long path in the woods by itself (follow information on the website) or by taking an appointment with Mario Ferrretti (phone: 0032 (0)67 45 86 21).

The trunk carvers will work in a separate area or in the wood if they don't use engine.

It is interesting for the artist to visit the site in order to think the project in integration with the place, however we understand that artists from abroad can't come.

Three prizes will be awarded:

-Sites en Ligne's prize, awarded by artist and organizer's votes.

-Audience Award for the trunks

-Audience Award for the installations

Each prize is worth 1,250 euros.

RULES

Equipment:

Each selected artist will provide their own equipment. When handing over their project presentation, they must mention their needs in water, electricity and anything else necessary. The organization will try to meet those requests. Please note that as the working sites are located in the woods, electricity will only be provided for the trunk carvers.

The forest is a private ground which is kindly lent to us! No living tree branches may be cut or damaged. Whatever the chosen materials and discipline may be, the key words are "respect for nature". The pre-selection judges will have to turn down projects that don't meet this principle.

Insurance:

Sites en Ligne will not be liable for accidents. Artists should have their own insurance policy if they feel the need.

Presence on the site:

The artists taking part in the symposium commit to being present during the entire week, as well as on August 27 to clean-up their own working site and leave it as it was when they arrived.

The trunk-carvers have 15 days after the symposium to remove their trunk, however the organization is not responsible for the damages caused during that period.

If that period was exceeded, the association Sites en Ligne could have the trunk at its discretion.

Selection:

An internal panel of judges will select the best 25 projects.
